

Intercultural Mediation Training and Social Education: By The Leadership of Universities Communication, Artistic Campaigns

It is quite essential to form dialogue mechanisms and dialogue channels to solve intercultural communication issues. Therefore, every country should develop an intercultural education project which aims to resolve international communication issues. The first chapter of the book is based on creative intercultural dialogue campaigns. The chapter defines the training process of common sense leaders and effective management of this process. The first chapter also develops peace literature strategies with powerful communication campaigns. The power of the art and the artist to unite the societies within the idea of peace is an important emphasis for the training of future common sense leaders in universities. So, the first chapter explains some creative artistic awareness campaigns for the common sense leaders training pioneered by universities. The second chapter of the book is based on creative strategies and original models. Democracy education campaigns for each middle eastern country is another important part of the chapter. Final part of the chapter is based on the sensitivity of artists and the activities of art on societal educational campaigns.
