

What Could Be Grander - Viking: The Building of a Lake

IN THE AUTUMN of 2005 a group of high school sophomores set forth on a quest to explore the origins of a lake and state park that had been built half a century earlier. They found a compelling story of vision and hard work, of obstacles and setbacks, of ordinary people committed to a cause they refused to abandon. Their research acquainted them with those who left the lake as their lasting legacy. One was Oscar Hultman, who wrote a letter to the local newspaper in 1949 urging public support, saying of the cause he had advocated for years: What could be grander?
