

Hesitations: The American Crisis and the War (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Hesitations: The American Crisis and the War On September 7, 1914, the German Emperor wrote to President Woodrow Wilson asking him for an impartial opinion with regard to the war which had broken out in Europe five weeks before. On October 8th the Dutch papers reproduced from the North German Gazette Mr. Wilson's reply to the imperial feeler. Mr. Wilson had read the Emperor's letter with the greatest interest and sympathy and he declared that he was honored at being the object of such a missive. He prayed God that the war would soon come to an end, and remarked cautiously and sententiously that later on there would be a day of settlement.
