

Cubas Ties to a Changing World

Focusing on Cuba's bilateral foreign relations - and especially its economic relations - since the end of the Cold War, this book explores the impact on Cuba of the major changes that have occurred in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union. The authors examine Cuba's ties with important, yet overlooked, countries and regions such as China, Japan and the Middle East, as well as with Britain, the European Community, the former Soviet Union, Canada, Mexico, Brazil, Central America, the Caribbean states and the United States. Their comprehensive examination of Cuba's interactions with these countries reflects the realities of the changing international order.
