

For the Fatherland: Vol. I

This is the first completed volume of a planned five volume series. In Volume I: On the Ground, we learn of the true story of SS Panzer Commander Joachim Peiper, his torture and abuse at the hands of American interrogators and his postwar murder in France by cowardly communists.

The next chapter From SS-Mann and Grenadier to Landser covers the heroic actions in battle of the lower enlisted soldiers who seem to be forgotten after any war. Next, we have the pros and cons concerning Field Marshal Eric von Manstein and his strained relationship with Hitler as well as his historic battlefield strategies that staved off defeat for Germany on the Eastern Front. Michael Wittmann the Panzer Warrior is next. If there ever was a successful model of a panzer commander in combat it was this man who had one of the fiercest reputations on any battle front. The Red Flood from Hell tells the truth about the Russians, Soviets and communists and how they shamefully conducted themselves in war. Next is The Blood Flag which gives the importance of the flag to the National Socialist cause and its members. In Bad Tolz, we learn of the SS Academy for officers which was taken over by the Americans in 1945 as a special forces training school. The revelations considering their educational agenda will surprise you. Every war has Medals and Ribbons and in this chapter we learn of a few German and Third Reich awards which meant so much to so many and how difficult they were to earn versus the American award system. Sgt Apitz is the true story of one man's tremendous bravery and courage on the Eastern Front. The last chapter for On the Ground is General Vlasov who was captured on the Eastern Front, worked with the Germans and eventually led a million man Russian army against Stalin only to be betrayed in the end by the Americans. The next part of Volume I is Not to be Forgotten Battles. The disaster at Dieppe is the first chapter where the British try to once again make a victory out of defeat and continue their habit of permitting others to die for the crown. Next, we have the famous armored battle of Kursk where a very surprising revelation is revealed which the Soviets have been hiding for decades. Then, we have the even more famous battle on the Eastern Front Stalingrad and the Death March with revised casualty figures that are truly shocking. In the Arnhem chapter, we learn what the Jewish producers of the film A Bridge Too Far and Montgomery did not want you to know. In the Six Battles for Kharkov, we learn how the Ukrainian people suffer through German liberation and Communist domination as their city is torn apart during the war. Crete/Kreta is next and we learn how the British have tried for years to turn history around by making this German victory a defeat and their real defeat a false victory. The next battle is The Sacrifice of Caen. Learn how Allied carpet bombing of the ancient city of Caen destroyed it for no good purpose. The Winter War is next and tells the story of the Soviet invasion of Finland, its political ramifications and how it was soon forgotten by the Allies to protect the Soviets. The Polish Campaign gives you the gruesome details of how the Polish people sanctioned by the Church in Rome and their own government massacred tens of thousands of German civilians from hatred and vengeance. Read how the vicious Poles refused to compromise and how they went to war on false promises from FDR, the British and the French, while Stalin set back and laughed at his democratic allies destroy the other. Lastly, we come to Eben Emael and learn of how Hitler personally designed and created a special unit force of a few commandos in gliders and conquered one of the strongest forts in the Western Campaign of 1940.
