Not illustrated. 1902 Excerpt: ...the internal arrangements were most unsatisfactory. The public room was too small and inconvenient. The small room adjoining looked almost like a horse-stall, and was neither ornamental nor useful. It might be let into the public room with advantage, and the window considerably enlarged. It was also important that more than one officer should be stationed at this office-window. Sir J. G. WARD (Postmaster-General) said an Inspector had been instructed to visit the place and report, and an officer would also report upon the question as to whether another officer was required there or not. THE COOK ISLANDS. Mr. HERRIES (Bay of Plenty) asked the Acting Premier, What laws, if any, of the Colony of New Zealand are in force in the Cook Islands? Sir J. G. WARD (Acting-Premier) said by section 10 of The Cook and other Islands Government Act, 1901, it was provided that the New Zealand Customs laws should be in force in the Islands. No other New Zealand laws had so far been declared to be in force in the Islands. TELEPHONE SERVICE. Mr. OMEAKA (Pahiatua) asked the Postmaster-General, If he will give preference to local ladies when vacancies occur in the telephone service in their respective districts? The Premier stated to him some time ago that when a country telephone service was established the claims of the country districts in this respect would be considered. Telephone exchanges had now been established in country districts, and when ladies residing in country districts applied for appointment to the office they were informed that their application would be considered. He thought that country ladies should in such cases have the preference. There were many young ladies who had to pay a large sum of money in order to further their education, and in a ...
