

The Defense of a Revolutionist (Classic Reprint)

James H. Dolsen, the defendant in this case, was born in San Francisco, CaL, Nov. 30, 1885. A few years later his parents moved to Illinois, where they settled in a small town near Chicago. Here he received his early education. He attended Beloit College, Beloit, Wis., for two years, and some time later, Northwestern University Law School for one year. He joined the Socialist party in 1910 in Chicago, where he became successively Secretary, Chairman, and Organizer of his Ward branch, and was for several years a delegate to the Cook County Central Committee. In 1917, he became an Organizer for the National organization of the Socialist party. He was sent by the National office to California, where he has since resided and been continuously active in the movement. He was elected a delegate to the National Convention of the Socialist Party at Chicago, which met there the end of September of last year. At the Convention, he joined the radical group which formed the Communist Labor Party of America. Returning to California, he aided in the formation of a state branch of that organization. It was because of his participation in the formation of the Communist Labor Party of California that he was arrested Nov. 18, of last year. This book is an account of his trial compiled by himself from the court records in the case. (Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and do not occur in the book.)
